Is a College Degree Beneficial?

In these uncertain times, why is it important to continue with higher education? With so many people unemployed, or whether you're looking to advance within your company, re-enter the workforce, change careers, or build on your associate degree, earning a bachelor's degree is a worthwhile investment.

A bachelor's degree can secure your future. Median earnings (2018) of bachelor's degree recipients (no advanced degree beyond the BA) working full time were $24,900 higher than those of high school graduates. Over the course of a lifetime, college graduates earn almost $1 million more than high school graduates.

Higher education is the best way to ensure consistent employment – high school graduates are twice as likely to be unemployed during their lifetime.

A degree conveys many other benefits as well. For example, college graduates report higher levels of happiness and job satisfaction, even after considering income levels. College graduates are healthier than non-graduates. They are more likely to exercise, more likely to vote, and have higher levels of civic engagement. Also add the joys that come with an increased capacity to appreciate culture, the arts, the world's diversity, and the inherent beauty of extraordinary ideas.

Benefits of a Bachelor's Degree:

- Increased Access to Job Opportunities
- Preparation for a Specialized Career
- Increased Marketability
- Increased Earning Potential
- Economic Stability
- Networking Opportunities
- A Pathway to Advancement
- Personal Growth and Self-Esteem
- Higher Job Satisfaction
- Positive Return on Investment
